THE MAGNIFICENT TREE PEONY (Paeonia Arborea) (Rhododendron of the Middle West)

Tree Peonies lend distinction and charm to your garden because they are unusually beautiful and rare. Their colors are different from those of the regular herbaceous peony; and not only do they possess the finest shades of pink, red and white, but also develop flowers of pure yellow, yellow and orange, lavender, violet, purple, etc.

WHAT IS A TREE PEONY? Unfortunately the name Tree Peony is not exactly correct because the plant does not form a tree but rather a shrub. While in herbaceous peonies the foliage and stem dies down to the root in winter, the stems of the tree peony become woody and the eyes form along the stems. The plant will attain a height of from five to six feet and in time produce as many as 200 flowers to the plant . . . flowers sometimes 12 inches across and always at least as large as those of the herbaceous peony.

HARDINESS AND CARE. Tree Peonies are very hardy; we have grown them in our nurseries for many years alongside regular peonies and never had any winter killing. Tree Peonies thrive in the same soil as other peonies, rich sandy-loam, well-drained. They do beautifully in semi-shade as well as in full sun. For fertilizer they like well-decayed manure and bonemeal. Complete Cultural Directions accompany every order.

TIME OF SHIPMENT. Tree Peonies can be shipped almost anytime because we grow many in 5" pots, which makes transplanting and shipping easy.

HISTORY. Centuries ago Tree Peonies were considered almost sacred in the Imperial Gardens of the Chinese Emperors. They were not only grown in borders and beds but also in large tubs, placed in inner courts. It is known that such tubbed Tree Peonies produced as many as 400 blossoms to the plant. They were so highly regarded that single plants were valued at 100 ounces in gold and when first introduced in Europe in 1789, were sold for as much as 100 Louis d'Or ($460.00) each.

Tree Peonies have long been cultivated in England until today there are but few gardens there that lay any pretense to beauty which are not adorned by the gorgeous blossoms of the Tree Peony. They are ideal for planting in formal beds, as specimens, or in tubs.

European Hybridizers have done wonders with this charming plant and we have spared no effort in obtaining and propagating the finest things that the world offers in the most exciting of all garden plants.

THE MARVELOUS AND NOVEL

LUTEA HYBRIDS

These Tree Peony Hybrids form a class all their own. They are hybrids derived from Peony Lutea. They have luxuriant bright green foliage and their blooming season is exceptionally long. They begin to bloom just before regular peonies and keep on producing buds almost two weeks after all other peonies are out of bloom. In this group you find the celebrated yellow varieties.

TREE PEONIES IN THE LANDSCAPE

Tree Peonies are especially beautiful when massed in front of groups of Evergreens. We also recommend them for planting between other ornamentals in the foundation planting. They do very nicely in semi-shade, but if planted near the roots of trees it is necessary to enrich the ground with well decayed stable fertilizer and later give them applications of bonemeal. Tree Peonies also lend themselves to planting in formal beds and as support for other plant material. In England they are used freely in formal gardens.

TREE PEONIES FOR FORCING

Unlike other types of peonies, Tree Peonies can be forced into bloom during the winter months. For this purpose they should be planted in tubs a year before they are to be forced. They can be had in bloom as early as January. We shall gladly furnish further information on the forcing of Tree Peonies.
